I love the cover of Lorraine Bartlett's new book Dead, Bath and Beyond. This is the December 6th upcoming release of the latest Victorian Square Mystery, book number 4. I very much enjoyed this story and I think you will too! Katie Bonner, main character is very likable and admirable. One of the things I like about this series and story is how Katie really has started her life over, found some solid footing after fate had dealt her a terrible hand and even gets a moment of revenge! One of the things I like about this series and story is how Katie really has started her life over, found some solid footing after fate had dealt her a terrible hand and even gets a moment of revenge! Unfortunately shortly after that small victory an untimely death throws another mystery in her lap, one that could have the most dire of consequences! I enjoyed the way this story was written and researched, I found I was caught up in the circumstances of the big reveal and relieved that Katie was safe, with a good cozy feel good ending not to miss.

Katie Bonner has just enjoyed a delightful day out sailing with Seth Landers when who does she run into. Her former arrogant and rude ex boss Josh Kimper.

The next day Katie is awoken by the sound of sirens pulling up to Sassy Sally's Inn where the body of... you guessed it Josh Kimper has been discovered!

Welcome back to Victoria Square in the fall where you will find a bakery, Artisans Alley and other shops.

The police start their investigation and so does Katie as she has to get involved as well

A wonderfully written cozy in a place that I would love to be able to go to and explore.

So great to be back with Katie, Andy, Rose and everyone else in Victoria Square.

Dollycasâ€™s Thoughts

Last week I read and reviewed the previous book in this series, One Hot Murder, that had been on my To-Be-Read shelf since 2013 when it was released. Because of this the delay between books 3 and 4 was not a problem for me. I have to say it is unusual to have a break like this between books especially when it is the same publisher. This book picks up close to where the last one left off so for me the flow was still there.

Last week I read and reviewed the previous book in this series, One Hot Murder, that had been on my To-Be-Read shelf since 2013 when it was released. Because of this the delay between books 3 and 4 was not a problem for me. I have to say it is unusual to have a break like this between books especially when it is the same publisher. This book picks up close to where the last one left off so for me the flow was still there.

Things are going well at Artisans Alley. Former detective Ray Davenport has leased a booth as he waits for his shop Wood U to be rebuilt after the fire. A beauty shop has also opened at the Alley. Her new friends, owners of the B & B, are getting ready to open but they have taken in an early guest. A guest that Katie knows quite well, her former boss, Jake. Katie worked so hard for him and he always took the credit. She wasn't unhappy at all to leave that job and him behind when she inherited the Alley. She was not happy to see him in her neighborhood, but she didn't even have time to find out why he was staying at the B&B because his dead body was found in a bathtub soon after he checked in. Of course, she is a suspect, they have a past and she did have a bit of a scene with him the day before, in front of plenty of witnesses.

I really enjoyed this story. I love the characters and the setting. Ms. Bartlett always delivers a top-notch mystery. She is joined this time by another wonderful storyteller in Laurie Cass, author the fun Bookmobile Cat Mysteries.

It was nice to see Ray on the outside of this police investigation and him actually being a sounding board and helping Katie with her sleuthing. They have become friends and Ray's daughters and I are even hoping for maybe more. That was my only sticky point to this story. Katie and Andy's romance is going nowhere. They work opposite shifts, they can't even seem to get together for lunches because something always comes up. She lives above his pizza place so they see each other every day and she steps in to help him when he is understaffed. But they seem to just be staying together just because it is comfortable but not really any fun. I know change would probably impact her living arrangement, but a romantic triangle would sure add some spark to the story. Maybe Andy would step up and make more of an effort in the relationship. Katie does have friends but she needs a man in her life who has time for a life. Maybe in the next book we will see these relationships evolve more.

Beyond Katie's personal life the story is pretty exciting. She does get in as usual over her head and this time almost literally. The suspense builds so that the pages start to flip pretty rapidly as we see how she is going to get herself out of the mess she got herself into.

I hope we don't have to wait too long for the next installment of this series. I am so glad it is back!

I won this book through a Goodreads giveaway.

I was excited to see the return of this series after a three hiatus, but, unfortunately, this book did not hold my interest at all. I found Katie to be annoying, her relationship with Andy uninspiring, and the mystery itself boring.

The writing in this installment of the series was poor.

It was incredibly... Juvenile. The dialogue was also really awful. I finished, but I did not enjoy this installment in the series. It's a shame, they had been so good! Katie was annoying in this book. I barely tolerated her "investigation". It was written as if the author is tired of writing this series but needed to churn out another one quickly to meet a deadline. 1.5 stars... Maybe even just 1.

The mystery this time was poorly done, and I felt like the characters behaved out of character- Don especially.

And then her relationship with Andy... she's tepid about it anyway, but yet gets weak kneed and moony over him- and then wonders why he's a bit perturbed about her dinner set up. It doesn't add up. Katie should not be this emotionally dense-- and then we have paragraphs where she admits she feels a certain spark with Ray. "There was no possible way she was attracted to him. No possible way. Besides, she had Andy, who was young and extremely good looking and smart and busy, or course, but wasn't everyone?" (direct quote from Lorraine Bartelett's Dead, Bath, and Beyond). One, Katie is terribly immature and self-centered... who cares if Andy is great looking and young? Are those his only good qualities? And, two, wow that's some terrible writing. Then we have this paragraph where Katie says she lacks self-confidence and then Britney replies "I'd guess all women do, right?"-- I get the sentiment. I lack some myself. But, this feels completely out of place in this exchange and this series. Then, she proceeds to beg Katie if Crystal (who has made countless blunders and almost burned her business down) and Katie says oh sure, think of something. You complete idiot. I don't believe you could solve a murder, let alone make your way out of a wet paper sack. (Which, by the way, sounds hard actually, but it's always said like oh man, that's so easy, but think about rolling around in wet paper. It would stick to you. I can see how it might take a few minutes. But, I digress. As often I do.)

I love this series, but I was disappointed. It just... wasn't good and I am reminded now of how disappointing the last Booktown mystery was and I'm wondering what's going on with a normally solid author.
