Music is a large influence in my life and in this story. I had the opportunity to share the playlist on All The Write Notes blog. If you're interested just click the link or take a look below! Be sure to share which songs you would pick too.

Ellery and Colter struggle through the book to love each other. She feels a burden to him on more than one occasion and this song beautifully represents that struggle.

Pretty simple. Ellery's heart is broken for a lot of reasons. This is a soft song that tells that story.

I've always loved this one. It's so haunting and the lyrics have always affected me. Ellery's world is a bit mad.

ONE OF THE MOST UNDERRATED BOOKS I'VE EVER READ!

The story is of a 17 year old girl named Ellery who has decided to kill herself. Her 6 year old sister had died a year ago and she blames herself for that. Ellery has decided the date and has saved up money for her funeral- now all she has to do is pull the trigger. But it turns out that the gun is broken. She goes to the store to replace the gun where a security guard of her age catches her. He turns out to be Colter, his classmate. Colter is now d

Ellery has decided the date and has saved up money for her funeral- now all she has to do is pull the trigger. But it turns out that the gun is broken. She goes to the store to replace the gun where a security guard of her age catches her. He turns out to be Colter, his classmate. Colter is now determined to help Ellery and does everything he can to stop her and even tells her a secret of his own. Ellery on the other hand is determined to kill herself. After that gun thing, she's planned her death some other way and has fixed a date as well.

This book had me quite a bit emotional and heartbroken when I found out why Ellery was so determined to kill herself.

I really liked Colter. He was selfless and did everything in his power to help others, especially Ellery.

This book will leave you overwhelmed and emotional and I don't even have the words to describe how much I loved it!

I was lucky enough to read an early version of TEACH ME TO FORGET. Erica can write emotion and multi-layered characters so well. I found myself crying and laughing while reading. This story has so much heart and all the feelings. I couldn't put it down until the end. So amazing!

TEACH ME TO FORGET is a poignant and unflinching look at Ellery, a teenage girl who has suffered serious trauma and wants to take her own life. Written with honesty and care, it's a story that is deep with compassion and sympathy for its protagonist, even as it examines " through other characters " the repercussions that suicide has on those left behind. This is dark and difficult subject matter, but it's handled with a deft touch, and, best of all, is driven by a wonderful narrator. Ellery is w

This is dark and difficult subject matter, but it's handled with a deft touch, and, best of all, is driven by a wonderful narrator. Ellery is walled off and hurting in the worst of ways, but she is also so damn smart. Super sarcastic. Bitingly funny, often in the most dire of circumstances. I loved her even when she was caustic. I loved her Nicholas Sparks jokes. I loved seeing her open herself again to the kindness of others, however hard and painful it was.

Also (LIGHT SPOILER) there is some really excellent kissing in this book.

A bold and emotional debut.

I received an ARC in exchange for an honest review

TEACH ME TO FORGET is an irresponsible, possibly even dangerous story about what teenagers should absolutely not do if they are concerned about a suicidal friend.

When Ellery notices similar suicidal tendencies in a childhood friend, she tries to talk to Dean and checks up on him when he misses school. Folks, this is NOT how you try to prevent suicide.

Driving by a house or restaurant to make sure someone is still alive is NOT suicide prevention.

Worrying is NOT suicide prevention.

Asking someone not to kill himself is NOT suicide prevention.

The only way to help a suicidal friend is to get them help by telling an adult, a teacher, school counselor, parent, aunt, friend's parent. Call a hotline for advice. A suicidal friend is too much for a friend to handle. Even if your friend promises you to secrecy, tell an adult. Having an angry friend is so much better than having a dead one. You even can offer to go with your friend to talk to the school counselor or her parents.
