Friendly fire, indeed. I think this was one of the most charming of the Christmas stories that has come out of St. Mary's, and it's not just because I love the hell out of Markham. And as expected, there was plenty of pissing and pooping involved. My expectations are fulfilled. :)

Gotta love it. :) Never give up, even if the cakes are little pieces of char. :) The play's the thing! Just look at the pretty lights!

As you probably know, I am addicted to Jodi Taylor and her brilliant writing style. Truly, I don't know how she does it but even before the end of the first page, I am hooked.

As you probably know, I am addicted to Jodi Taylor and her brilliant writing style. Truly, I don't know how she does it but even before the end of the first page, I am hooked.

This festive short story is as we've come to expect full of humour and of course a pinch of history - this time king Alfred the Great and the 'Burning of the Cakes' episode. The difference is that we are given Markham's point of view (usually it is Maxwell) and what a view it is! I think Markham is one of the favourite characters (or are they all favourite?!). Anyway, to hear his voice and thus what goes in his head is hilarious, but also heartfelt, as we discover a little more about our security man and the way his department sees the 'historians'. Priceless!

More please!!!!

This was a really fun little story told from Markham's POV which was quite a change from Max (our usual main character for this series). Markham is on the security team for St Mary's and when the team sets up the Christmas party he gets into all sorts of crazy schemes! :)

BWAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!

As people following my reviews know, I'm a huge fan of Jodi Taylor's and the short stories we get every year are no exception.

Special about this one is that 100% of all proceeds go to Help for Heroes (a charity for British soldiers) and that this time Maxwell is NOT the narrator.

At first, I thought the latter would ruin it since I LOVE Zara Ramm's narration, but as it turns out, Piers Wehner as Markham (our favourite security officer) was bloody br

3.5 stars really but only because it's a short story, I don't like giving short stories 5s because they are too short! :)

But oh it was great but it didn't answer the burning question from the end of the last one, so UGH!! I wanted answers! But good story and good to hear it from Marham.

Now I need the next book.
