Dylin hates Christmas. To get away from the holiday cheer she agrees to interview snowboarder and adrenaline junkie Dash Grainger. When she is trapped with this gorgeous man in a chalet because of a snowstorm all bets are off.

Dash doesn't really want to do the interview but he agreed anyway. When he finds a beautiful reporter in the chalet he is taken by surprise at the feelings she awakes in him. But is known womanizer Dash capable of deep and serious relationships?

With nothing else to do other than talk they really get to know each other in a short frame of time. Dylin is stunned at the depth Dash displays, at the insights she gets from have a glance into his soul. He has profound messages she is open minded enough to analyze and finds that he is not the shallow playboy the press makes him out to be. The more the minutes tick by the less she can resist this gorgeous man.

This was a short quick read with surprisingly much character development. Dylin is a sweet young woman who had her heart broken, not only by her ex-boyfriend but also by her father. She isn't flighty but the allure that Dash presents is irresistible and I can see why. He is amazing, warm and considerate. He doesn't deny himself true love, he knows that once he finds it he will give everything. It was refreshing for a change.

What was also surprising was the level of angst. I didn't expect it but it made the story all the more compelling. I actually had tears in my eyes at some point.

Was their attraction insta-lust? Sure. Was it realistic. No..but it was fun and sweet and damn, all kinds of hot. I loved this introduction to M. Leighton's books and I'll be definitely reading this author's other works.

Stars!

Nothing makes me happier than a new book by Michelle Leighton on my Kindle, add into that joy, that this is a Christmassy one, and was the perfect read for this time of the year.

It was also nice and quick to get through, which means it's the perfect read for an afternoon or evening of escapism over the busy festive period.

I really liked Dash and Dilyn together, Dilyn isn't a fan

Sweet and super sexy are the words that describe this little treat of novella to a T, since I devoured it as fast as a delicious Christmas cake.

Dash and Dilyn find themselves stuck in a cabin in a middle of a snowstorm, and took a chance, and opened up to one another, like they had never done before in their lives, because from the very first look they felt the connection, and the deep seated feeling that they could trust, that they could rely on each other.

They both had childhood hurts and traumas that left them scars, so it was like this the recognition of a kindle souls, and for two people who had never truly loved before, this night may just have changed not only their view on the world, but their entire future. They never really stood a chance! LOL!

And Dash for all of his daredevil, playboy persona sure did surprise me, because his feelings where so clear, and his words deeply touching and meaningful. We could feel that deep down he knew that he had found in Dilyn what he himself never knew that he was looking for, but clearly craved: true love.

But this man isnâ€™t made only of tender moments and sweet words, because he is every bit of panty-melting manliness that Dilyn thought she was prepared for, but even in that he was so much more, because not even her strength and sassiness were enough to fight a one on one contact with Dash. Specially considering the way he truly wanted to contact with her! Because OMG, was that man HOT!!!

Michelle Leighton really gave us the perfect little holiday treat, with all her usual and incredible writing and amazing character development but in a short and insta-love setting that left me just as hooked as her full length novels. You guys know what a good insta-love whore I am, so let me tell you this one was just fantastic!!! So, please, Michelle, bring on more treats like Dash and Dilyn!!! He may have given Dilyn Christmas back, but you sure brought us Christmas! Merry Christmas to everyone!

I have a bit of a love-hate relationship with novellas. I love everything about holiday stories but often am left wishing they were a bit longer due to them usually being shorter than regular novels. I had high hopes that M. Leighton, a favourite author of mine, could pull off a satisfying story for me and I was not disappointed.

I had high hopes that M. Leighton, a favourite author of mine, could pull off a satisfying story for me and I was not disappointed.

In

, we got Dilyn and Dash's stormed-in story. Despite this being a shorter book, I already had a keen sense of who Dilyn Hart was by the time she arrived, just before a snowstorm, to the chalet in Colorado where she was going to interview snowboarder Dash Grainger.

Fair warning, if you can forgive the insta-love aspect, which is a must when going into a romance novella, you will love the chemistry and hotness that takes place during the snow storm. Dash's reputation as a dare-devil playboy was quickly replaced as we got to know the real him, vulnerability and all.

This story also packed in a lot of angst over miscommunication and had me rooting for Dilyn and Dash to find their Christmas miracle.

Wendy's Thoughts

Dilyn Hart had no

Dilyn Hart had not be ready to commit to her boyfriend. Two years later and she and the ex still worked together. Both stayed professional, well sort of, with cutting sarcasm from her most of the time. We are in the room when her ex informs Dilyn she has to fly out to Colorado on Christmas Eve to do the sought after interview of champion snowboarder and gorgeous playboy extraordinaire, Dash Grainger.

For Dilyn, the annoyance about the assignment isn't that it is Christmas time...She is thrilled to be doing something to take her mind off of the holiday. She only has awful memories and trying to block out that time of year is perfect... No what is causing some push back is the wish to do more investigative reporting... something meatier. She is reminded of how Dash doesn't do interviews and to please just do the assignment.

Now during this exchange with her ex, Dilyn is picking up some confusing vibes...she is getting the sense that maybe the ex is leaning in and wanting more from her...Curious...

Dash Grainger didn't want to do the interview either. His manager arranged it... and he was not happy. He was planning a mindless time at his mountain chalet... with a visit after Christmas by one of his playmates who loved... loved visiting him whenever he was in town. The manager told Dash, not to worry, the interview would only take an hour of his time.

Dilyn, being snarky Dilyn, did not pay close attention when the driver explained there was a storm coming. She was still too busy thinking of the mixed signals from her ex. Impulsively she acts to see what all those vibes meant and is slapped back with a rude awakening...As she processes what she has experienced, she arrives at Dash's chalet.

Wait a minute... It was supposed to be a spa and it is a single house in the middle of nowhere...and as the driver is taking her bag to the porch, no pleading or even asking nicely will convince him to stay as he knows for sure... a major snowstorm is minutes away and he wants off the mountain.

Dilyn goes into the house and sees how amazingly beautiful and tasteful it is. This is top of the line. There is a note from the manager telling her Dash will be available. The photographer calls her cell to let her know he is at the hotel in town. Dilyn still thinks she will be able to do the interview and leave...

In walks Dash from a late ski run. Dilyn had done her homework... she knew he was handsome, built and a player... But in person... front and center...
