The fun continues in this follow-up to one of my favorite reads of 2016. A few years have passed and our beleaguered heroine is about to wed the man of her dreams . . . at his parents' retirement community. The odd and continuously problematic location, plus a spacey wedding planner and a bunch of interfering seniors, add up to one comical situation after another and a lot of headaches for the bride and groom.

Sunset Havens is about the least likely place I can imagine for a young couple to get married, so kudos to the author for her originality and delightfully warped sense of humor. The obstacles Graham and Summer encounter on the road to getting hitched are increasingly hilarious, but I really felt for the poor bride-to-be as it seemed like nothing was ever going to go her way. It was nice to see that her parents, who were such a neurotic handful in the first book, had grown and were supportive of Summer throughout this story. Her mom even comes to the rescue like a champ on more than one occasion! I liked that there were several chapters written from Graham's POV so that the reader gets to see what's going on in his head during all of these calamities. He and Summer aren't always on the same page, but he really does love her and wants her to be happy.

Although things don't go as Summer hoped or planned, I think they pan out in exactly the right way for her and Graham. Their relationship started out very quirkily, so why wouldn't them tying the knot be the same? The ending of this book left some loose threads hanging, so I think there may be another Summer story in the offing. I would love to see Summer and Graham with a baby. I'm sure Joan and Richard would be a riot as grandparents. (I can totally see them carrying Graham, Jr. around in The Duffle!)

This was another very entertaining read from Beth Labonte that I recommend to Chick Lit lovers. You're in for a few surprises with this one!

Got to be a bit of a tedious read after awhile. Book seemed to try too hard to be entertaining, like trying to fit in every imaginable snafoo that could occur. First book in the series had me looking forward to reading this one but after this I think I'm done with the series.

After meeting Graham Blenderman on a cruise ship two years ago, Summer Hartwell is dreading her upcoming nuptials which are only weeks away. With a free wedding won by Summer and Graham, to be hosted at the luxury retirement complex where Graham's parents reside, followed by a honeymoon in Jamaica, Summer's nerves are pushed to the absolute limit while witnessing flirtatious behavior from the elderly residents towards her betrothed. Unapproved alterations have been made to her wedding dress, the wedding plans have been sabotaged, and strange accidents seem to be constantly happening to her family, but it is not until a direct threat comes crashing through the window that Summer realizes somebody has her in their crosshairs. Investigations bring shocking results, as Summer follows the clues to the culprit behind it all.

Beth Labonte's second book in the Summer Series really had me scratching my head, as a simple wedding turns into a shocking, yet hilarious, game of cat-and-mouse which left me on the edge of my seat from start to finish. Summer's incredible sense of humor was well honed and in perfect form throughout Summer at Sunset, causing raucous amounts of laughter in my home causing the cats to hide. Beth Labonte has a real knack of telling an exciting and entertaining story which keeps her audiences captivated from the first page to the very last. The hidden clues throughout the text made me want to re-read the book over and over, not only in case I had missed something during the first read, but so that I can relive all of the hilarity once more. I thoroughly enjoyed Summer at Sunset and cannot wait to get my hands on the third book in the series, after having read and enjoyed the first book, Summer at Sea, so long ago. I wholeheartedly recommend this fine tale to all fans of comedy-romance, mystery and suspense, and personally cannot wait to read it all over again... and again and again.
