Lots of sex, not much plot.

The MCs read like teenagers, not adults. Macio was a conceited douchenozzle. Aiden was the lovesick heroine.

The sex happened too quickly and abruptly. The guys don't discuss safety until AFTER they bareback, which isn't sexy at all.

And the cheeze, OMFG, the CHEEZE. The bad MF smell was all over this one.

The epilogue was sweet, but by that point I'd sprained my eye balls rolling

This was me, seeing this cover and understanding this was written by one of my favorite writers..

It started great. Two very hot likable characters Macio and Aiden. The insta-love was there but they made it work somehow. It was believable.

Their first email exchange was funny and even their first sex was hot. But then for me it went downhill. Macio turned into a lovesick puppy and Aiden just stuck to his role as Nicholas Bella is one of my favorite authors and I was looking forward to reading his collaboration with Mrs. Walker, a new author to me.

Well, Undisputed wasn't what I expected. Not at all. Especially the last 50% of the book... It even didn't feel like a M/M novel anymore.

It felt more like one of those cheesy chicklit books I've read before I discovered the wonderful world of M/M romances.

Overall, just not my kind of book.

This book started off good. I really, really liked the lead in to the start of their relationship, how Macio invited Aiden back to his hotel to do the interview correctly, and when the questions were over, Macio made his move, asking Aiden to stay and then touching his hand, then his lips. Aiden was stunned, it was so cute and funny. Really liked that whole beginning.

I really, really liked the lead in to the start of their relationship, how Macio invited Aiden back to his hotel to do the interview correctly, and when the questions were over, Macio made his move, asking Aiden to stay and then touching his hand, then his lips. Aiden was stunned, it was so cute and funny. Really liked that whole beginning.

I also enjoyed the start of their relationship. They were only supposed to have that one night together and then move on, but neither of them could forget the other and eventually Macio created a fake Facebook profile to friend Aiden and they started to message each other that way, and talk and learn about each other. It was all very well done I thought. Even Aiden being willing to let Macio stay in the closet. As a sports writer, Aiden understands how difficult it would be to be an out and proud gay athlete, especially in the MMA.

Unfortunately, things started to go off the rails when the two decide to actually have a relationship and Macio tells his trainer and his manager/publicists. While on the surface, both men say they are supportive of Macio having a closeted romance with Aiden, Macio's manager (I forget his name, grr!!) is truly not. This fact wasn't well disguised to the readers so if this was supposed to be a shock, the writers failed in that regard.

In addition to this, Macio's trainer says he needs a beard to alleviate suspicion (why all of a sudden this is needed I do not know because Macio has been alone and single for a long time, using male escorts to satisfy his needs) and so his daughter, Kathy(?) (who "had" a crush on Macio before) agrees to be the beard. She is not all right in the head, IMO. A few cards short of a full deck, if you know what I mean. ;) I didn't like her at ALL. I knew right away she had a secret agenda. Despite the fact that Macio is gay, and hasn't hidden this from her, she thinks she can turn him straight, or trick him into having sex with her, which he rebuffs, BTW. She's mental.

As time progresses things just get weirder and more unbelievable. I didn't like the manager, Kathy, or how stupid Macio and Aiden were with handling the whole situation. A lot of implausibility going on, which is such a shame, because like I said, this story started off so great for me. It became sappy and emotional and it felt

. I didn't like how the characters changed personalities. Kathy was a real bitch and selfish, trying to get Macio for herself, and then when Macio and Aiden break up, she plays all sweet and sincere in trying to get them back together. Nope, those two personalities don't mix.

JustJen "Miss Conduct"

- Macio is a champion MMA fighter with a sole focus on winning. He is also deeply closeted for the betterment of his career, relying solely upon discreet escorts to sate his needs. He is cocky and stand-offish where the media is concerned, until he agrees to an exclusive interview with Aiden, a well-known journalist for one of the best magazines in the industry. - Macio is a champion MMA fighter with a sole focus on winning. He is also deeply closeted for the betterment of his career, relying solely upon discreet escorts to sate his needs. He is cocky and stand-offish where the media is concerned, until he agrees to an exclusive interview with Aiden, a well-known journalist for one of the best magazines in the industry. Macio is still somewhat closed off with Aiden at their first meeting, but there are definitely sparks flying. Unable to get Aiden out of his head, especially once he learns Aiden is out and proud, Macio sets up another interview, and their trust in one another grows quickly from there.

The biggest issue these two face is Macio's closeted status. Aiden has already dealt with a previous broken relationship when he refused to be put back in the closet, but he decides Macio is worth it and takes up residence in Closet Estates once again. This situation seems understandable and believable given Macio's profession, and it is easy to see why Aiden chose to play along while their relationship grew. But, Macio is convinced by others on his team to do things to keep up straight appearances, including the use of a beard. Macio makes some pretty bad choices where Aiden is concerned, though he wasn't trying to be malicious or purposely hurt him.

I'm usually pretty good at just enjoying a story for what it is, but there were a few blatant issues here that I have no doubt will rub readers the wrong way. I actually thought Kathleen, the Beard, had a tinge of multiple personality disorder. She went from one extreme to the other and back again in a fairly short amount of time. Aiden comes across as a domesticated doormat at times, taking whatever he can get from Macio. These feelings were present, along with a few other niggles, but it was also easy to see that these guys just totally fell hard for each other and while trying to do what was best for Macio, lost sight of the repercussions of their actions.

All in all, this was a fast-paced, often exciting story that had plenty of MMA action, but not so much as to be too much. Once these guys were together, they were pretty focused on each other, as opposed to any outsiders, and they realized what was important in time for a nice happy ending.

While I wasn't totally wowed by this story, there were plenty of aspects to enjoy that kept me turning pages to the end. I hope these authors join together again and look forward to seeing what they come up with next.
